Riding the AI Waves

(3) How to use AI

How AI works? It would not jump up out of ground zero and teach you this and that. It can only make response to you. That is you ask questions and give orders, and they fulfill you.

For example if you want to give a graduation speech, you must tell it your main points, like the workload is very heavy or the outlook is very prospective, or the differences of studying aboard and in local colleges..... etc. The more data you give out, the better the answer will be elaborated. During the working process, at first it is a powerful search engine, it can search a lot of data, but not just presenting to you, it will give comparison and elaboration. But if you do not give it guideline and just ask it to write a graduation speech for you, it is unable to do so, for they do not know what you want.

That means you must ask first and it will give you an answer, but it would not answer things you do not ask for the scope is infinitive and they cannot do it.

We have to take a live example of the argument between Trump and Federal Reserve chair Powell. Trump wants to push Powell to cut interest rate, but Powell ignored. Every analyst is saying the Fed chair is independent of White House, and need not listen to them. The news is copying from another news. This independence is known worldwide, so how can investors evaluate whether Powell would bent and bow before Trump? AI is not a fortune teller, and it is hard for them to forecast. But if you give them some data, it would help you to elaborate. Some people thought that Federal Reserve bears a nickname which is central bank of central banks, the Fed chair's salary must be very high. But if you do not have a correct idea, no one can help you. I pointed out that his salary is very low, he is not working for money but for his own ideal. I asked the AI to list out the salary of central bank presidents, the Fed chair is lower than Bank of Japan, Bank of England, European Central Bank, and on top of the world is the Hong Kong Monetary Authority's president which is 5 times more than the Fed chair. If you know this point, the AI would not list such a table for you and you would miss a major point.

Central Bank	Leader	Estimated Annual Salary (USD)	Notes
Hong Kong Monetary Authority	Eddie Yue	~$1.1 million	Considered the highest among central bank chiefs globally
European Central Bank	Christine Lagarde	~$460,000	2022 salary reported at €427,560 ¹
Bank of England	Andrew Bailey	~$650,000	Estimated from UK public sector disclosures and media reports
US Federal Reserve	Jerome Powell	~$203,500	Salary set by Congress ²
Bank of Japan	Kazuo Ueda	~$270,000–$320,000	Based on Japanese government disclosures ³ ⁴

Please refer to the above table of The Express on July 18th 2025. That is why I said the AI would not replace your job, but a capable AI user can replace a non-capable AI user.

This is a strong evidence that the Fed chair is not working for money only, or else if he can shift his job to either of the above central banks, he can get more money easily and much welcomed and admired, so why he has to obey to Trump his supreme boss who gave him so little a salary? Just saying independence is no use, not persuasive enough, you must show out some peculiar points in order to show your essay is different from others.

So if you do not have any concept on the salary of all central bank presidents, how can the AI help you? Therefore you must upgrade yourself first and then let AI help you to become a special user. You must point out a path first and the AI would lead you to a very special place, and if you point out another path, the AI would lead you to another world you don't want or you don't need.

AI can help ugly duckling transform to swan, in Chinese is mountain chicken to phoenix, just see how you use it and how you ask unique questions
