Many are most focused on Elon Musk's xAI. The company is rapidly building AI infrastructure in Memphis, Tennessee, and neighboring Mississippi. To meet its massive energy demands, xAI's South Memphis facility operates at least 18 methane gas turbines, sometimes without permits. These facilities have been accused of emitting pollutants that impact predominantly African American communities already burdened by industrial pollution. Meanwhile, Microsoft, Google, Meta, and Amazon are also searching across the country for massive, windowless concrete data centers to cope with the unmet computing power demands of AI. Phoenix, Arizona, has become a hotspot for tech companies, with Mayor Kate Gallego noting that residents are increasingly weary of the ever-increasing number of data centers in the community, straining already overburdened water and electricity grids.

US President Trump stated today that despite the Supreme Court overturning his global tariffs last month, he still has the authority to impose tariffs.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent said on Monday (16th) that the U.S. is currently allowing Iranian oil tankers to pass through the Strait of Hormuz to ensure the stability of global energy supplies.

Trump indicated he might postpone his visit to China, intending to pressure Beijing to help unblock the Strait of Hormuz.

Strategists at major Wall Street banks said that despite the risks posed by the Iran war, their investment logic for U.S. stocks remains valid. Strategists at Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, and JPMorgan Chase pointed out that earnings growth and valuation support remain, although the latter is still high, but not to the same extent as before. The Goldman Sachs team said they expect the S&P 500 to eventually resume its upward trend, continuing the historical pattern of markets typically rebounding after geopolitical risk events. Morgan Stanley's Michael Wilson said the market is "far ahead of the risks that are now apparent." He noted that although "we cannot rule out the possibility of continued short-term volatility before a final low is formed," he remains bullish on U.S. stocks from a six- to twelve-month perspective.

Financial Astrology. Lottery & US Stocks

No matter whether you support the US or Trump, you cannot change the current situation. No matter if the war has to be fought for 4 to 6 weeks or 4 to 6 months, you cannot change it. Is everything so objective?

Certainly not!

Can destiny be changed? If it can be changed, do you still call it destiny? Or we could say it can be changed within a certain pre-designed scope. If AI recommends a group of stocks, the final decision is still in the investor's hands. Some would say that if you are lucky this year, this month, or even this week, you would earn more than others even if they are browsing the same AI recommendations. It is true!

In the past year, every time AI stocks were recommended, some people could pick the most profitable one while others could not. Why? Simply because some people have better luck in January, some in February, some in March... Even in the same month, someone's luck may be best in the first week, while another person's may be in the second or third week... Even in the same week, some people's luck is better on Monday and others on Tuesday... and so on. So what about the hours?

Some people choose their own best time to invest. His best time may be your worst, and your worst may be his best. In the exchange house, buyers and sellers gather. If everyone feels optimistic, they are all buyers and no one will sell to you. If everyone feels pessimistic, they are all sellers and no one will buy from you. For every deal, someone makes a profit and someone takes a loss.

Buying lottery tickets is similar. Some people choose their most auspicious time to buy a ticket with their favorite numbers. Of course, they cannot make a big fortune at once. But as it continues, their best luck may come. They may first win small awards, and later larger ones at the right time.

Then you need not worry about whether the US will win or Iran will win, whether Russia will win or Ukraine will win.

None of your business! What matters is whether you can make your own money. Let them shout “Go! Go! Go!” and run forward into fireballs, or shout “No! No! No!” and stay away from bombs and missiles. Let them generate fake AI videos and fake AI news - you cannot change them. When war breaks out, the first thing that dies is the truth.

The Express will adopt a new format effective April 13 (Mon). It will be supported by YouTube videos. There will also be a training course to teach retail investors how to buy at their most auspicious time, choose their most profitable dates and hours, and select their most favorable lottery numbers. Don't think about the first prize yet-start with consolation prizes first, and then improve step by step.

This is unique in the financial market and unique in mysticism, but it may be worthwhile to try.

Keep watching The Express. Further details will be announced day by day.

The war in Iran will not end in 4 to 6 weeks. It will extend past the Summer Solstice and end before the total solar eclipse on Aug 12.
